City commissioner helps save choking woman

BY AJOWA NZINGA IFATEYO
aifateyo@herald.com

Opa-locka City Commissioner Bobby Bradley was hailed as a hero this past week after he used the Heimlich maneuver to dislodge a large pill from a woman's throat at the Opa-locka Diner.

BRADLEY

Lola Martin, 77, had left church at about 10:45 a.m. Sunday and gone with her friend Roscella LaVerity to the diner at 14511 NW 27th Ave. for boiled fish and grits.

Bradley and former Opa-locka Mayor Albert Tresvant sat near them in the front of the restaurant.

A problem developed when Martin began to take prescription medication.

"It wouldn't go down," Martin, who lives in Bunche Park, said on Monday. "I couldn't breathe like I should've."

OPA-LOCKA

LaVerity started yelling: "Help her, she can't breathe."

Somebody in the restaurant used a cellular phone to call 911. Meanwhile, customers felt powerless.

"Nobody knew what to do," Tresvant said.

Bradley did.

"I lifted her up and first started pumping her stomach," he said. "Then I gave her three sharp blows." A pill popped out, according to other customers.

Martin coughed and then said, "It hurts."

Once she started talking, Bradley said, he knew she would be OK.

Miami-Dade Fire Rescue arrived within five minutes and checked Martin out.

Bradley said he learned the technique in 1978 when he was a student at Florida Memorial College in North Dade. In the maneuver, which dislodges objects from the windpipe, a fist is used below the rib cage to force air out of the lungs with a hard upward thrust. Bradley used it on his father in 1982, he said.

On Monday, Bradley said he was glad to help Martin. "I'm just happy she's OK," he said.

Martin said she was touched by Bradley's fast action.

"He jumped up and came over," she said. "He was very kind. I appreciate it."

Dear Charisse,

The Dade Heritage Trust is glad to be able to report—at last!—that we have secured more than enough to meet the Dade Community Foundation challenge grant of $5500 for the protective fence for the City of Miami Cemetery. We appreciate your patience and understanding in our taking so long to complete this project.

As you can see from the attached, the City of Miami has allocated $105,105 toward the purchase and installation of an eight-foot, steel picket security fence. This association was the result of much persistent advocacy and monitoring of city progress on the part of Dade Heritage Trust staff, board members and volunteers. We worked closely with the City of Miami's Parks Department to invigorate a stalled bidding process and were very involved in the designing and planning of the fence to ensure that it is attractive and appropriately configured.

Our Dade Heritage Trust Cemetery Task Force Chairman, Penny Lambeth, has worked tirelessly on this project. She even searched out the owner of the debris-filled lot adjoining the Cemetery---(it was the corporate owner of Fisher Island!)---and succeeded in shaming them into cleaning up their litter and garbage so it would not detract from the beauty of the soon-to-be installed fence. The task force has also energized several hundred volunteers to clean the grounds, scrub the tombstones and plant more than $20,000 worth of donated flowering trees and shrubs in the Cemetery. Our annual Dade Heritage Days' African-American Cemetery Commemorative Service will be held April 30th in a cemetery that is vastly improved from three years ago.

Since we have succeeded in raising enough from the City for the actual fence construction, Dade Heritage Trust would like to spend $3000 of this $5500 grant to upgrade the gates of the fence to make them more ornamental, and we would like to request that we be allowed to allocate $2500 for our ongoing efforts to oversee and monitor the installation of the fence and maintenance of the City Cemetery.

Thank you very much.

Sincerely,

Dear Becky,

This letter verifies that the City of Miami Department of Parks and Recreation, with support from Dade Heritage Trust, will expend approximately $105,105, toward the purchase and installation of an eight-foot steel picket fence around historic Miami City Cemetery. The fence is currently under construction and is projected to be completed within forty-five (45) days.

Should you require additional information, please advise.

Sincerely,

April 4, 2000 Speech at the "Shake Rattle and Roll" Demolition Ceremony of the Sears Building and the Commencement of the Work which will preserve the Sears Tower as a Landmark of the Performing Arts Center

by Becky Roper Matkov

This is a long awaited day. We have all looked forward to the construction of a beautiful Performing Arts Center, with great expectations for a golden age of the arts in Miami to ensue. And it is exciting to celebrate the rebirth of this part of Biscayne Boulevard.

Biscayne Boulevard's first great beginning was over 71 years ago—in 1929 when this very Sears Building opened. According to architectural writer Beth Dunlop, over 6000 people traveled here that day just for that event. Miami had been through a lot during those years. The city had been devastated by the Killer Hurricane of 1926, and then suffered through the collapse of the 1920s real estate boom and the 1929 stock market crash. But then, as now, Miami's many problems didn't stop it from forging ahead. And as a vote of confidence in Miami's future, Sears Roebuck agreed to be the anchor for the Biscayne Boulevard Company's new upscale shopping area—located right here. The Chicago firm of Nimmons, Carr and Wright designed this Sears store as an avant-garde showcase for a prestigious uptown neighborhood. Towers were the symbol of Sears stores during that era, and for Miami's Sears Tower, the architects chose a new style—Art Deco, with decorative filigree and bas-relief ziggurats. The Sears Tower was the first commercial use of Art Deco in Miami, preceding the many Art Deco buildings—now so famous and familiar to the world—that were constructed in the 1930s and 40s on Miami Beach. This Sears was built on a traffic circle—now long gone—that was criss-crossed by trolleys, cars and buses connecting the mainland to Miami Beach. And the focal point of that beautifully landscaped intersection was the Sears Tower.

Thus today's gathering to demolish most of the Sears Building is bittersweet for preservationists. As I was going through Dade Heritage Trust's thick files on the Sears, I thumbed through almost twenty years worth of effort and eloquence in behalf of saving the Sears Building for posterity.

As long ago as
In 1982, encouraged by preservationists like Arva Parks and Howard Kleinberg and Barbara Capitman, even I—a relative newcomer to Miami at the time, gave a speech at the Miami City Commission to save the Sears building from eminent destruction. Not because it was the oldest, or grandest or most architecturally dazzling, but because it was an important part of Miami's history—
And each time a quirky old building is leveled, Miami's heritage is depleted. We need visual reminders of the past to give us a sense of continuity with all those movers and shakers, artists and architects, politicians and dreamers, brilliant and crazy and fascinating people who preceded us. To a preservationist, a building's always better the second time around.

Which is why today is also a time to celebrate. Thanks to the dedication and persistence of pesky preservationists who just wouldn't give up and go away—and thanks to the support of the Miami-Dade County Commission—and thanks to Michael Spring and the Cultural Affairs staff—and thanks to the leadership of Parker Thompson and the members of the Performing Arts Center Trust—the Sears Tower has been incorporated into the design of this exciting new Performing Arts Center. When renovated and refurbished, the Sears Tower will be a one-of-a-kind restaurant and interpretive center, with historic exhibits funded by the State Bureau of Historic Preservation—and now that I think of it—it will be a perfect starting point for historic tours of the entire area.

We commend you all for recognizing that tying in an old landmark with a new landmark adds a richness not only to the structure itself but to the texture of our urban fabric. We thank you for ensuring that though we lose the Sears Building, the Sears Tower will still remain on Biscayne Boulevard, serving as a landmark in Miami's twentieth century past, and a beacon to its twenty-first century future.

Curtiss Mansion, Inc.

Dear Mr. Suco,

On behalf of Dade Heritage Trust, Miami-Dade County's largest historic preservation organization, I want to offer our enthusiastic support for the restoration and preservation of the Glenn Hammond Curtiss residence as an historic landmark for the State of Florida.

The Curtiss Mansion, listed on the National Register of Historic Sites, is incredibly important both locally and nationally. It is the former home of Glenn Curtiss, a world-famous aviator and developer who built Hialeah, Miami Springs and Opa-locka in the 1920s.

This Pueblo-style house, which has barely survived vandalism, neglect and arson, is on Dade Heritage Trust's list of "10 Most Endangered Historic Sites" in Miami-Dade County. We are delighted to see the efforts now being made by the nonprofit organization, Curtiss Mansion, Inc., to save this treasure for posterity.

We look forward to working with you in any way we can to bring new life to this fascinating historic site.

Sincerely,

Becky Roper Matkov
